Fading Leaves. The poor fading leaves, come borne to us on the light breeze as we muse here in the PRIVATES .- P D Arsino, Geo Barr, Joseph early Autumn twilight. Poor fading leaves ! Thy mission is akin to that of mortals .--Their days are transitory and fleeting as would but listen, and tell them of their mortality, and that they soon must lay aside the gay and cheerful robes of life, for the more sombre ones of death.

The leaves that a few weeks ago were green and bright are falling, falling! Soon these giant forest trees, will be stripped of the light graceful leaves that have been trembling and flitting over them, soon the shrill hoarse music of the winter wind, will sigh through these branches. Bright has been the sunshine that has flitted among and across these boughs, sweet has been the music of summer zephyre, aye! sweet as the sweetest of music, has been the voices of the wind among the green leafy twigs. Very sweet has been the united voices of birds, wind, and leaves. Very harmonious were the anthems, chanted here in these old trees. Grand and richly look the trees, with the gorgeons autumn robe of various and countless hues .-Ah! summer with all its brightness and beauty is dead and gone. Its light fleecy clouds, its warm rains, its pearly dews, its rainbow tints on hill and valley, have all passed away. 'Passed away!' how full of meaning are the words! We utter them, but do not comprehend half of their import. Autumn in all its gorgeousness is he.e. Fading and falling leaves are scattered in profusion Win. Argy, 2d, Win. Bagley, A. J. Bagley, F. Bixby, A Batchelder, Win. Barron, Henry Boutwell, E. Boutwell, Charles Brock, H. Q. The breezes sign mountfully, and the leaves come home to our side with a fad mournful should read the lesson that is written on these leaves. Every leaf would convey a lesson if man would listen to the teachings of nature. Fading leaves! The words are full of meaning. They speak to our hearts, with a voice powerful and solemn. They tell us of lives that must surely fade away like these poor, withering, inanin a e eives. They tell us of caskets, that contain precious jewels, that must surely become as the dust of earth. They tell us, that of the countless myriads, that now throng the stage of life, in a few Graves, Luther Graves, Wm. M Gibson, Elisha Geo. Woodbury, J C Willey, H Washburn, J of earth. Fading, fading leaves! We take Godard, Josiah M Green, Joseph F Headley, D Williams, T G Pillsbury, Geo. Bailey, S J them, and crush t e a within our grasp. They them, and crush t en within our grasp. They are frail perishable things. So are mortals, " Oh! world! oh life! on time!"

Time passes, changes occur, and we like the Autumn le ves are fading away. We, like them shall soon be crashed and trampled in the dust. But it will matter little where the casket is laid, if the jewel is safe. GERTRUDE M. WEST.

A REMARKABLE PARISH.—There is a parish in Hanover. Germany, where there are cleven thousand communicants in a year, evcry adult being a communicant with a few rare exceptions, and every communicant a frequent participator. The services in the week are as well attended as on the Lord's day. Since 1852 the parish has sent out to Eastern Africa twenty missionaries and eignty-eight settlers, and twenty-nine raissionsries are to sail in 1861. The paster edits a er, John Macomber, Horace Brownell, David Missionary Magazine, which has a monthly circulation of fourteen thousand copies, and brings in an annual revenue of three thousand crows. The success of their missions is wonderful. If it be asked how a single village parish has been enabled to do what it has done, our answer should certainly be this: The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much. It wes Patter Harm's custom to pray to God, rather than to appeal to men, for help, and in how remarkable a manner his prayers were answered, the above will show.

General Lyon was a man of true moral courage. He never would recognize the code of the duellist. It is said he was once struck in the face, but refrained on religious principle, from challenging his adversary. This erty Aldrich, J W Sanford, John Nason, H J Bliss, Augustus Bowsolman, John McEvoy, Lou- subjected him for a time to the contempt of Bailey, B O Currier, Robt. H Collins, Joseph Page, Wm. Blanchard, M V Rogers, C E Col- Somerville, N A Baker, John Royle, H W they learned to understand and respect his position on this subject. No one can doubt his bravery.

> New York, Oct. 11. Advices received by the State Department from England and France are highly encouraging. Public sentiment in these countries has greatly improved in reference to the war.
